Heavy metals found in Kelantan Orang Asli blood, community fear poisoned by mining

By Mithunee | Dec 10, 2024

Blood tests on the Temiar community reveal higher than normal levels of chromium. Iron ore mining that turned the rivers red may be the reason.

This series was supported by the Pulitzer Center.

Angoh Along, 76, was an adept swimmer and skilled fisherman, but on July 23, 2016, he died in just three feet of water.

His body was found trapped among logs and shrubbery which rampaged down the river in a flash flood, along with boulders and mountain debris, some 10m

WhatsApp vigilantes in India are converting Christians by force

How far-right Hindu nationalists use WhatsApp to target Christian families when they're most vulnerable by preventing them from leaving their homes.

By DARTS MN
20 December 2024 | 10:00 AM GMT+8

It was the day of his mother's funeral, but Jadhav and his family knew the dozens of people descending on his home weren't there to offer condolences.

While his father was diagnosed with throat cancer in 2014, the family noticed they were receiving letters from a neighbourhood they'd never heard of, and their prospects for good medical care were bleak. A neighbour told them that adopting Christianity would provide fellowship and prayer that might help with her illness.

"We were all alone (and) didn't know what to do," Jadhav, who was then the 26-year-old, told Rest of World in June. He was sitting beneath a tree outside his two-room, two-story home in the heavily forested Western region of Chhattisgarh state, over 1,400 kilometers (900 miles) north of Delhi. "We needed a sense of community. [Christianity] gave us hope."

WhatsApp vigilantes in India are converting Christians by force

By PARTH JIN
15 OCTOBER 2024

I was the day of his mother's funeral, but Jashbir Kashyap knew the dozens of people descending on his home weren't there to offer condolences.

When his mother was diagnosed with throat cancer in 2014, the family panicked. They were substantial farmers from a marginalized tribe in the hills of central India, and their prospects for good medical care were bleak. A neighbor told them that adopting Christianity would provide fellowship and prayer that might help with her illness.
