重點摘要

- 從產前到產後，生理與心理都面臨不了的問題
- 聽不見孩子哭泣、看不清表情，也能摸索出當媽媽的方法
- 職場中與不適應到解，那些在婚育路上的社會支持

編按：今年，多多益善和中華民國身心障礙聯盟（下簡稱「聯盟」）合作「身心障礙女性生活」計畫——由於聯盟曾經深入訪談身心障礙女性，發現女性在障礙身分交織的生命經驗中，面對許多特殊的處境，例如，擔任母親育兒的不容易，面對婚姻和家庭關係的衝突、接受性教育的經驗，以及就業時面對的困難等。

我們以深度報導和經驗者領大機專稿，深入呈現身心障礙女性的經驗和聲音。本篇報導因此由中華民國身心障礙聯盟支持，《多多益善》秉持「獨立報導原則」製作完成，共同讓重要的議題被深入討論。

關於獨立報導原則：《多多益善》與合作方互信溝通、力求共識，但本誌擁有報導方向、受訪者選擇、訪問設定與稿件修改的最終決定權，並於合作備忘或合約中具體載明。

The perils of abortion for Myanmar women

27 December 2025

Abortion carries a strong social stigma and is illegal in Myanmar, pushing many women to seek it in Thailand or, for those who cannot afford travelling to the neighbouring country, the use of dangerous pills bought on TikTok.

By RIDDYI DIBON / FRONTIER

Ms Ni Ni arrived at the Klongton Hospital in Bangkok on April 25 seeking an abortion after her boyfriend forced her to terminate her pregnancy. About 32 weeks into gestation, the 23-year-old had travelled alone from Yangon after consulting with a female cousin living in the Thai capital.

She underwent a surgical abortion which took about two hours and cost her nearly 20,000 baht (US$615), including a private room for one day of rest.

"It was a relief that I had a passport and was able to save up the money," Ni Ni told Frontier, using a pseudonym to hide her identity due to the stigma attached to abortion in Myanmar.

Ni Ni had a successful abortion and felt physically well, but an acute depression lingered. It was the emotional weight of post-abortion that tormented many women, accompanied by a sentiment of frustration and a diminished status.

There was also an image that haunted her ever after she returned to Myanmar: the contemptuous smile of a man.

"In the end of the surgery, the pain was extreme despite the anaesthetic. I sobbed and cried out loud. It was then that the doctor smiled at me," Ni Ni remembered. "It was a painful smile, she was mocking me as if I had been playing around and now I was afraid of the pain."

"I had overreacted myself all the way from home. I prepared myself to be mentally strong, but when I saw that nurse smiling I felt so sad I wanted to die right there," she said.

Ms Ni Ni arrived at the Klongin Hospital in Bangkok on April 29 seeking an abortion after her boyfriend forced her to terminate her pregnancy, about 32 weeks into gestation, the 25-year-old had travelled alone from Yangon after encountering with a female cousin living in the Thai capital.

She underwent a surgical abortion which took about two hours and cost her nearly 32,000 baht (US$1,000), including a private room for one day of rest.

Ni Ni had a successful abortion and felt physically well, but an acute depression lingered. It was the emotional weight of post-abortion that scars many women, accompanied by a treatment of frustration and a hormonal storm.

There was also an image that haunted her even after she returned to Myanmar: the contemporary male of a nurse.

"At the end of the surgery, the pain was extreme despite the anaesthetic. I shouted and cried out loud. It was then that the nurse smiled at me," Ni Ni recounted. "It was a painful smile. She was mocking me as if I had been playing around and now I was chief of the pain."

"I had encouraged myself all the way from home. I prepared myself to be mentally strong, but when I saw that nurse smiling I felt so sad, I wanted to do right there," she said.

Japan's elderly are lonely and struggling. Some women choose to go to jail instead

JAN 05, 2025

Tokyo — The rooms are filled with elderly residents, their hands wrinkled and backs bent. They shuffle slowly down the corridors, some using walkers. Workers help them bathe, eat, walk and take their medication.

But this isn't a nursing home — it's Japan's largest women's prison. The population here reflects the aging society outside, and the pervasive problem of loneliness that guards say is so acute for some elderly prisoners that they'd prefer to stay incarcerated.

"There are even people who say they will pay 20,000 or 30,000 yen ($130-190) a month (if they can) live here forever," said Takayoshi Shiranaga, an officer at Tochigi Women's Prison located north of Tokyo, during an extremely rare visit granted to CNN in September.

Within the prison's light pink walls and strangely serene halls, CNN met Akiyo, an 81-year-old inmate with short gray hair and hands dotted with age spots. She was serving time for shoplifting food.

"There are very good people in this prison," said Akiyo, who CNN is identifying by a pseudonym for privacy. "Perhaps this life is the most stable for me."

Inside a closed Los Angeles courtroom, something wasn't right.

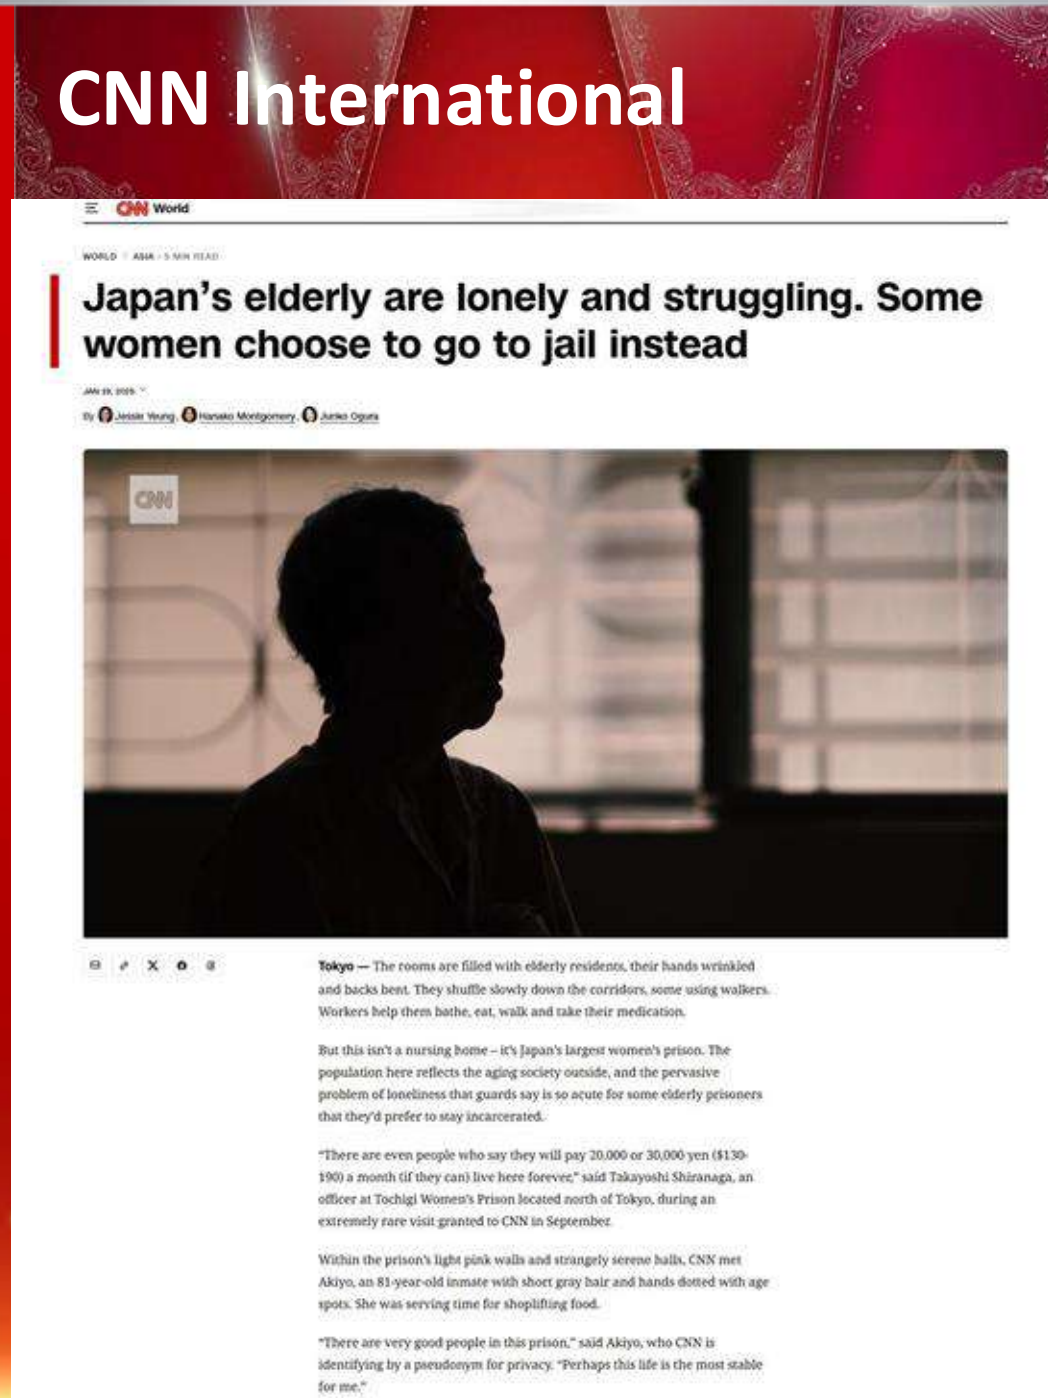

Clerks working for family court Judge Amy Pellman were reviewing routine surrogacy petitions when they spotted an unusual pattern: the same name, again and again.

A Chinese billionaire was seeking parental rights to at least four unborn children, and the court's additional research showed that he had already fathered or was in the process of fathering at least eight more—all through surrogates.

When Pellman called Xu Bo in for a confidential hearing in the summer of 2023, he never entered the courtroom, according to people who attended the hearing. The maker of fantasy videogames lived in China and appeared via video, speaking through an interpreter. He said he hoped to have 20 or so U.S.-born children through surrogacy — boys, because they're superior to girls—to one day take over his business.

過去十年，台積電已躍身為全球半導體產業最重要的企業之一。從iPhone的核心處理器，到人工智慧熱潮後的算力引擎，幾乎每一次科技革命的浪潮，都離不開它的身影。

如今，這個在台灣被稱為「護國神山」的企業，不僅蟬聯全球市值前十，更躋身了先進晶片制程近九成的產業。

而在地緣政治與產業競爭的雙重壓力下，台積電正以前所未有的速度走向世界：在美國亞利桑那斥資上千億美元建廠，在日本熊本攜手索尼、豐田合作建廠，今年更獲軍機回，那些因素推動了這家企業走向世界化？

本期「端聞」，邀請資深資深記者吳政達，為你講述這個「世界的台積電」。

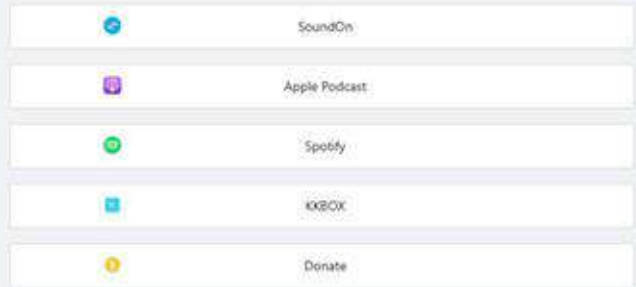

「世界的台積電」是由端傳媒旗下「端聞」推出的音頻系列報導，除了了解台積電為何走向全球化，更深入講述在這些巨流之下，那些推動、承受、甚至被改變的人與故事。

[Taiwanology Ep.52] Seeking Peace in Taiwan: An Israeli and a Palestinian in Dialogue

As the world marks two years since the October 7 conflict, peace feels more distant than ever. Israeli peace educator Roi Silberberg and Palestinian scholar Hazem Almassry share deeply personal stories—from childhood in Gaza to life in a shared Jewish-Arab village. They reflect on Gaza's devastation, Israel's militarized "normal," and Taiwan's own security, arguing that peace begins not with agreements, but with dialogue.

03:00 — Hazem's childhood in Gaza and path to Taiwan
09:50 — Roi's journey into peace education
20:15 — Family under siege: Hazem's life and loss in Gaza

Himal Southasian

Why Tamil Nadu resists the RSS – a conversation with T M Krishna and Harsh Mander

发布日期: 2023年12月30日

(Note: This episode was first published on Himal Southasian's YouTube Channel on 5 November 2023. This is a colour-adjusted version of the same episode.)

The trajectory of the RSS in south India is very different from its history and progress in the north and northeast of the country. While coastal Karnataka was the landing ground of the Sangh in the south as far back as the 1950s, Hindutva found little traction in large parts of the south till the last decade when Narendra Modi and his BJP have been in national power. The biggest resistance to the RSS and Hindutva has been in Tamil Nadu.

In this episode, musician and political commentator T M Krishna speaks to Harsh Mander about Tamil Nadu's long history of social movements that has led to this resistance. They examine how the state's linguistic and language-based faith traditions have stood as a bulwark against the RSS's attempts at homogenisation under a Hindutva umbrella. Krishna points out the multiple streams of religious influence on arts in India, especially in music, and how the RSS has tried to deny this past in service of the ideological project. "Carnatic music is symbolic of something for the RSS. It is symbolic of their puritanical and cultural superiority... Homogenisation or rather a linearisation of that is convenient for them."

You can listen to audio versions of this conversation on:

• Spotify: <https://bit.ly/3UQ9nsd>

• Apple podcasts: <https://apple.co/3Kjywws>

This episode is part of Season Two of Partisans of the Heart. In this season, Harsh Mander speaks to leading scholars and observers who have studied the RSS closely. Together, they examine its roots and core principles, its Hindutva agenda, and its corrosive role in India's public and social life across a century.

"Saffron Siege", runs from 17 September to 3 December 2023, with a new episode releasing every Wednesday. Himal's podcasts are available on YouTube, Spotify and Apple Podcasts.

Production: Innaad of Hana, Lydia Smith, Reika Chauhan, Nayantara Narayanan

Earlier this year, Chinese student Zhenhao Zou was jailed for 24 years for drugging and raping ten women in the UK and China. He has been described by police as one of Britain's "most prolific sexual predators". After his trial, detectives said they feared he may have attacked 50 more women - many of whom are yet to be identified. Following connections on Chinese social media, reporter Wanqing Zhang from the BBC's Global China Unit has been speaking exclusively to several of Zou's victims, and a translator who has helped them, revealing shocking details about his crimes.
